Your responsibilities

- Conducting an individual research project in the field of European Jewish History from the 16th to the 20th century. We particularly welcome comparative and cross-border perspectives on religion as a domain of knowledge, experience and interaction as well as on interreligious dynamics within and beyond Europe.
- participation in the development of the IEG's research agenda through publications and research activities
- mentoring international (doctoral) research fellows
- organising academic events and working towards consolidating the IEG's international network

We are also happy to see participation in outreach and knowledge transfer activities for non-specialist audiences and appreciate interest in the application of digital tools and methods to historical research.

Your profile

- completed and outstanding PhD in a field relevant to the job description
- high quality academic publications in the field of early modern or modern European Jewish History
- internationally oriented academic track record
- excellent organisational and interpersonal skills
- very good command of English
- good knowledge of German or willingness to learn German within a reasonable time during the contract period

We offer

- further training and opportunities to develop your career in a renowned research institute
- the possibility to shape and expand your academic profile
- a creative and motivating working environment in an international team

Applications

Please send your application (including CV, transcripts, list of publications and a project outline of no more than 1,000 words) via email to the Leibniz Institute of European History (bewerbung@ieg-mainz.de) by 25 February 2024, stating the reference number WMA-EJG-2024; all documents should be submitted in a single file (PDF).
